Questions 30-32

Li was born in Taitong County, Taiwan. When he was eight years old, he went to study at an all boy' school. He was an able student and athlete, good at sumo wrestling and baseball. Li even represented Taitong in Taipei in a sumo wrestling competition.

In 1943, the government claimed that Li volunteered for the Japanese Army and was sent to Indonesia. During a battle, he was separated from his squad and deserted (I think). Li escaped to the mountains, where he lived on wild pheasants and game, fruit and roots. Li was bitten by snakes several times and almost died from malaria. A strong desire to see his family once again gave him the strength to proceed.

In November 1974, the Indonesian air force was running some routine exercises. When they discovered a two-meter square hut with a thatched roof high in the mountains. A naked "barbaric-looking" man holding firewood and a knife was standing nearby. Upon trying to communicate with the man, the Indonesians realized something was up. Later, they realized they had located perhaps the last participant of World War II—a Taiwanese Aborigine from the Ami tribe.

The story was reported extensively in the international media. Li returned to Taiwan in 1971, and he died of lung cancer four years later when he was 60 years old.

30. What kind of student was Li?
- (A) He was only good at sports, such as baseball and sumo wrestling.
 - (B) He liked baseball and sumo wrestling more than studying.
 - (C) He discovered that he was good at both school and sports.
 - (D) He was able to go to school and dreamed of becoming an athlete.
31. Why did Li join the Japanese Army?
- (A) He wanted to see Indonesia as well as other places.
 - (B) He really wanted to escape Taiwan.
 - (C) He had a strong desire to see his family again.
 - (D) He was actually forced to join the Japanese Army.
32. When did the Indonesian soldiers finally realize that Li was not Indonesian?
- (A) When they saw his little hut.
 - (B) When they noticed his clothes.
 - (C) When they tried to talk to him.
 - (D) When he dropped the firewood.

Questions 33-37

One evening, Eric went to a ____ (33) ____ banquet. Since Eric had given the bride and groom a red envelope stuffed with ____ (34) ____, he thought he should “get his money’s worth”. After eating several plates of lobster, abalone and other expensive dishes, he gulped down several glasses of red wine. Eric was by no means a teetotaler; ____ (35) ____, he managed to get quite drunk. After vigorously shaking the bride’s hand and kissing the groom, he realized it was time to leave.

“I’m in no condition to drive,” Eric said to himself, walking out of the banquet hall. “I’d better get a taxi.” ____ (36) ____ had he reached the exit than a dark blue and white taxi pulled up. As Eric was drunk, this didn’t seem odd. All he noticed were words “to serve and protect” written on the vehicle’s door. “I’m in luck” he smiled reading the word. “Not only does this taxi give good service but the driver also carries a gun to keep the passengers safe.”

It wasn’t until the “taxi” had arrived at its final destination (which did not resemble Eric’s apartment) that Eric realized he’d made a terrible mistake.

“You really shouldn’t drink so much,” said the police officer, ____ (37) ____ the door to jail cell.
